

Draw for Change!

Original title: Draw for Change!

In Draw for Change!, female cartoonists and their drawings offer a glimpse into some of the most pressing issues women face today. Using a mix of documentary and animation based on the style of the cartoonist, every episode is directed by an established local female filmmaker. In Egypt, Dooa El-Adl questions what has changed for women since the Arab spring, while Victoria Lomasko from Russia creates cartoons about how state violence pushes Russian men towards domestic violence. Each have a dramatic story such as Camila de la Fuente, who had to flee Venezuela because she got involved in protests against the regime; while Ann Telnaes almost lost her first job due to sexual harassment.
