

Formidable

Original title: Formidable

Mathieu fills his days as a lollypop man, helping children cross the road and trying not to be drunk on the job. One day, fate snaps its fingers and Mathieu stupidly causes an accident. He pleads with Marc, one of the parties involved in the collision, to absolve him of any blame. But Marc, a police equipment salesman, is up to his eyes in problems: he faces a nasty divorce lawsuit and bankruptcy. His only option is to sell his stock of 750 NYC flashlights to the national police and get his life back. But then his wife steals his car and his credit cards bounce. Mathieu offers to help Marc as long as he takes the blame for the accident. Thus, two men with nothing in common drive to the Ardennes on a cheap motorcycle with NYC flashlights on their shoulders and not a dime in their pockets. Marc and Mathieu's journey is a tale of love lost and friendship won.
