

Fugue, A Light's Travelogue

Original title: Fugue, A Light's Travelogue

The film Fugue, A Light's Travelogue is a result of trying to understand the complexity of light. Through this work I started figuring out what light and the importance of its energy is all about. Physicists responded with an unsatisfying 'that's a philosophical question', philosophers returned with the same 'this is a question for physicists'. So I wandered through the history of its science and constructed a film that piles up details of it, in order to sing for its existence in an essay. I believed that if I projected and re-filmed images associated with the history of the science of light, and then re-projected and re-filmed these films again, and repeated this process over and over again by adding a potentially infinite number of new layers, I would eventually arrive at a sensible insight.
