

Jack and the Cuckoo-Clock Heart

Original title: Jack et la mécanique du cœur

Edinburgh, 1874. Jack is born on the coldest day ever and his heart remains frozen. His midwife is half-witch, half-shaman. She knows how to save the baby by replacing the broken heart with a watch. This prosthesis seems to work very well, with the proviso that Jack must avoid any intense emotional charge: he cannot get excited or angry and, above all, not fall in love. But the fiery eyes of a street singer put the heart of our hero to the test: his irresistible desire to re-find her drives him on a love quest which leads him from the Scottish lochs to the arches of the Alhambra in Granada.
