

Kris Kras

Original title:

Kris Kras, a spicy cocktail with two of the most popular ingredients needed for exciting television : celebrities and human interest. The programme selects two celebrities, one man and one woman, from totally different backgrounds and plays with this contrast. They are followed in their daily lives (e.g. at work, at home, in their favourite bar, etc...) as well as at crucial or interesting moments (e.g. a singer during a final rehearsal, a football player the day before an important game, etc...). Often far removed from spots and television studios they are placed in a totally different spotlight. The crosswise editing mixes several sequences of both protagonists in a funny, parallel way. Kris Kras peeks behind the scenes into the lives of celebrities, gauges their thoughts, dreams, views, passions, sins and aversions and highlights personal, funny and sometimes shocking characteristics. It is no attempt at creating a personality cult, but an objectively genuine view of public personalities, presenting them in a way they have never been seen before.
