

Leading Lights

Original title: Eclaireuses

Marie and Juliette leave their teaching jobs to open La Petite Ecole in the heart of Brussels, a place where children, without previous schooling and often living in exile, are welcomed. Setting aside formal learning, the pair offer time and space for the children to be children again, before they face the demands of school. The film follows their efforts and their research, forcing us to see the school system as a possible perpetuator of the oppression that affects us all.
