

Living Like a Common Man

Original title: Living like a Common Man

Youngsters in developing countries all over the world dream of going to the West, hoping to earn money and get overseas experience in order to improve their position back home. But the reality is that they end up doing low-status jobs and living crammed into houses with other newly-arrived migrants. This film follows the daily life of one such house in East London, in which the bunk beds are occupied by young Indians, all from relatively wealthy backgrounds in Gujarat. Will they fulfil their dreams?
