

Nocturnal Butterflies

Original title: Nachtvinders

A beautiful moth leads us towards the waiting room of an abandoned railway station. Suddenly a surreal situation comes to life. Inspired by the work of the Belgian surrealist painter van Paul Delvaux. Raoul Servais: Nocturnal Butterflies is the only film that was entirely made in the 'Servaisgraphy technique'. It proved to be a very interesting technique on the field of visual result, but became obsolete because of the complicated labour it required and the development of digital technology.
