

Once Upon a Time

Original title: Er was eens

A six-part documentary series about the Royal Belgian Institute for Natural Sciences (RBINS) and the scientists who work there. The series considers various specialties of scientific research from a philosophical point of view, in particular a major natural science collection, the people who run it and how it tells the story of humankind. By collecting, preserving and organising artefacts from our natural history, we examine ourselves as one of many species on this planet, while considering our humanity and seeking to determine our place in the universe.
