

Only With Hunters Do We Have Wild Animals

Original title: Only With Hunters Do We Have Wild Animals

Through the lens of inter-generational hunting practices, this experimental documentary reveals a profound connection between land, ocean, and community. Balancing the voices of the Truku and Tao peoples with the filmmaker’s own perspective, it meditates on the role of cinema as a meeting place for addressing local and global ecological challenges. At its core, the film is an exploration of encounters across cultures, landscapes and responsibilities.
