

Reinhou, My Sculptor

Original title: Reinhou, mon sculpteur

Blaise, the youngest of the family, feels a void in his life: his father, Flemish sculptor Reinhou, died two years ago. A very public man and member of the Cobra Movement, he never spoke about his painful past life nor about the ambiguous relationship he had with his native country of Belgium, which he left 30 years before. His father was already old when Blaise, the maker of this film, was born. Blaise searches through all the interviews and numerous archival photos and videos in order to discover who his father really was.
