

Seed

Original title: Zaad

After his mother passes away, Dries discovers his father's bipolarity. The care this mental illness imposes in his young life leaves no place for mourning. Countering the way society ruthlessly treats his father absorbs all his attention. Eventually – while in a closed section of a mental hospital – his father dies of a heart attack. Emptying his parent's home, Dries discovers an old letter from his grandfather. The more Dries digs into the past, browsing through film and photo archives, the less he can avoid a growing fear that his father's psychiatric illness might be hereditary, from grandfather to father to son. What, then, will germinate in Dries' children?
