

Sense of Tumour

Original title: Gevoel voor tumor

For six years, Tristan Devriendt has pragmatically split his medical education between theory at the bar and practical anatomy between the sheets. But just when he's at the top of his game and things move to the next level, lightning strikes: Tristan is diagnosed with cancer... It's a huge blow, from one moment to the other he goes from being a doctor to being a patient. And to make matters worse, he literally crashes into Hanne right after he receives the bad news. At first, she gives him a hard time, but Tristan falls head over heels in love. It's the start of a bumpy, unlikely, unique love story that will give Tristan the fuel to fight the cancer. But is the relationship between Tristan and Hanne strong enough to endure such an ordeal? And what impact does the disease have on Tristan's life, on his family and on his friends?
