

WTC A Love Story

Original title: WTC A Love Story

In the 1970s, the populous neighbourhood around Brussels-North Station was demolished to make room for 'Little Manhattan', a modernist dream with the two World Trade Centre towers as its crown jewels. The project failed, leaving the towers and surrounding area largely abandoned. In 2017, the private owners and politicians joined forces to re-dynamise the area. Fearing that history might repeat itself, Lietje Bauwens and Wouter De Raeve decided to enter the debate by making a film with the actors that claim a voice in the transition: politicians, activists, designers... Taking the WTC towers as its object, the film investigates the actual impact of ecological and participatory ideas in contemporary urban redevelopment processes.
